

Point of View: A Creative Writing Workshop

Friday, May 15, 2026

12:00 Noon, Pacific Time

Harvey Morse Conference Room 6

Featuring:

Kelli Auerbach, MFA

Kelli Auerbach, MFA, has published personal essays in outlets including New York Times and Washington Post, was a senior research director at the NIH, and has taught creative writing at Brown University, USC Keck School of Medicine, Rhode Island School of Design, University of Cape Town and at conferences nation-wide.

Topic Summary:

Every story has a point of view – the perspective from which a story is told and how information is revealed. Understanding how point of view works is critical to crafting powerful, moving, and effective stories. In this workshop we will learn, and practice, different lenses through which to tell stories. Meant to be fun, educational, and an opportunity to flex your creativity, the workshop is open to all – no writing experience required.

Registrants limited to 20 slots. Lunch will be provided.
Scan the QR code for information & registration.

For more information visit <https://artsweek2026.vfairs.com/> or email Candy.Duong@cshs.org